

LUCIE THORNE

Lauded for her unique voice, poetic lyricism, and tender-to-gutsy electric guitar playing, Lucie Thorne has earned her place as one of the most striking lyricists and voices of Australian contemporary song.

Her new album, Bonfires In Silver City has been receiving extraordinary praise across the country, described by many as her best work yet, and sees Thorne further hone her spacious, gritty, “exquisite miniatures of distilled emotion” (The Canberra Times), with that signature warmth and intimacy for which her live shows have become so renowned..

A collection of songs written on the road – touring Europe and Australia almost constantly for the past two years with her last release, Black Across The Field – the sound of Bonfires In Silver City has grown out of the musical empathy and camaraderie Thorne has developed during this period with legendary drummer Hamish Stuart. Produced by Thorne in close collaboration with Stuart, most of the album was tracked live over three days, and shining at its centre is their remarkable duet sound. Expansive, playful, loose and real.

Thorne’s last album, Black Across The Field (2009) was awarded Best Roots Album of 2009 by The Sydney Morning Herald, was short listed for the prestigious Australian Music Prize, and earned her a place as one of Australia’s most distinctive contemporary songwriters, and with Bonfires in Silver City she has clearly hit her stride.

“Thorne writes some of the most simple and beautiful songs you will hear” (The Age*)

Lucie Thorne grew up in northern Tasmania, the daughter of a poet father and music loving mother. After relocating to Melbourne for several years, she is now based in the tiny locality of Bimbaya (pop: 4) on the edge of the emerald Bega Valley on the far south coast of NSW. It’s here in an old wooden cottage by the Tantawangalo Creek that Lucie spends some precious down-time in between extensive Australian and European tours.

“Australia’s PJ Harvey... possessing the punch of Cat Power and the wise words of Joni Mitchell” (The Courier Mail)

BONFIRES IN SILVER CITY:

“Bonfires In Silver City reveals a subtlety and craft that eclipses Thorne’s prior work.” (Martin Jones, Rhythms Magazine)

“I’ve been listening to three great female artists in the last month; the first two, Gillian Welch and Emmylou Harris require little introduction to most, their bodies of work substantial, their standing already verging on legendary. The third is a name lesser known, but her album Bonfires in Silver City is undoubtedly the best of all three. Lucie Thorne is one of our own, and with this album she makes a firm statement that she is one of our finest. World-class.” (Chris Peken, Alternative Media Group)

“Mitchell fans will sense a resonance of 1976’s Hejira, for many her masterpiece, in Bonfires In Silver City...., the records are strikingly similar; poetic, introspective works that have a solidity and wholeness.” (Ian Cuthbertson, The Australian)

"Not long ago, I was driving through the Wimmera at night, back roads beyond Horsham. No towns and no lights except the moon and stars. Lucie Thorne was singing in the car; I loved 2009's AMP-nominated Black Across the Field but this year's album is sensational. The songs are small and finely formed in the same way that Gillian Welch's are, the attention to microscopic folk/rock/country detail immense. That night way out west the songs shone out of the dark; it was religious. Great music will do that for you and I give thanks."

(Chris Johnston, The Melbourne Magazine, September 2011)

"Thorne's powerful intimacy [is] embedded in each song. At times stylistically similar to the late Chris Whitley... Thorne has breathed in love and life and returns both as art. Hers is a poetic gift; Bonfires is a river of sound, its currents best revealed the more deeply you listen." (The Age, August 2011)

"Lucie Thorne's 2009 album, Black Across The Field, was my album of the year; it was shortlisted for the prestigious Australian Music Prize and helped her find a new, larger audience. She has a lot to live up to with the follow-up Bonfires in Silver City, but has yet again proven that her songwriting, arranging, guitar playing and singing are, dare I say it - world class. Think an amalgam of Joni Mitchell, Emmylou Harris and The Cowboy Junkies. She is an artist well worth discovering and I can't think of another Australian artist I would recommend more highly right now." (Dave Clark, Readings Monthly, August 2011)

"Somehow both restrained and edgy, Thorne retains her seemingly effortless ability to weave spaciousness into her songs, which makes them all the more enthralling. Bonfires In Silver City is further proof Thorne deserves to be mentioned in the same breath as Australia's first ladies of indie singer/songwriter fare" (Drum Magazine, August 2011)

BLACK ACROSS THE FIELD:

"Without exaggeration Black Across The Field is as good as anything I've heard this year. Growling with warm tube overdrive, stinging like Neil Young... this is a diverse, profound album, with nuances subtle and breathtaking" (Martin Jones, Rhythms Magazine)

"Thorne's songs are exquisite miniatures of distilled emotion, her melodies and harmonies are sublime, and the way she pits grinding guitars against that ethereal, sensual voice is like watching a thunderstorm in the distance. By turns dark and tender, Black Across The Field is a beautiful album." (David Curry, The Canberra Times)

"This gentle chanteuse has delivered quiet perfection. There is such an intensity of feeling here ...moody folk, country noir... a collection of stories that speaks small but resonates much bigger. One of the finer albums of the year so far...Thorne marks out her space with some fabulous sensuality." (Bernard Zuel, Sydney Morning Herald)

"This is music that can be tender and taut, full of the subtle nuances of real life as opposed to the black-and-white world of simple pop. There's tough guitar and autumnal shades, haunting slow-mo rock, Neil Young-esque guitar lines... And right up front is a voice with a quality that keeps drawing the listener in." (Noel Mengel, Courier Mail)
